ABSTRACT

Designed to supplement and augment Charles W. Smith's Pacific Northwest Americana (3rd edition, 1950), this bibliography is a comprehensive list of books having their own indexes that are concerned with the Pacific Northwest or such portions of it as Alaska, British Columbia, Idaho, Oregon, Montana, Washington, and the Yukon. This book--which has its own subject index--cites 1,244 English language titles through 1978 in one author alphabet; joint authors and editors are cross referenced throughout. Title entries are found when no author or editor is apparent, and basic bibliographic information is provided for each entry. (RAA)

PREFACE

This book is designed to supplement and augment Charles W. Smith's Pacific Northwest Americana (3rd edition, 1950). My bibliography is a comprehensive attempt to list every book having its own index that is about the Pacific Northwest or parts of it including Alaska, British Columbia, Idaho, Oregon, Montana, Washington, and the Yukon. The Smith checklist, and others, tell many features about a book, but not the fact if a book has an index. Books with indexes are lasting works in that they can easily be consulted for reference purposes. This book (with its own index) lists these books that matter in one author alphabet so that it can be used as a handy checklist or as a reference book in itself.

Over 1240 English language titles through 1978 are included representing many subject fields. About nine-tenths of the books listed were actually examined at the following locations: the University of Washington's Pacific Norhtwest Collection, the Washington State Library's Northwest Room, and the Myron Eells collection of Northwest History at Whitman College. Those books not actually seen but listed as having indexes were collected from extensive searches of on-line data bases and a variety of reliable printed catalogs. Because the automated union lists that are now forming and growing will someday include most of these titles, I have chosen not to try to duplicate that location feature, nor try to tell more than the basic bibliographic description of each book, just enough to uniquely and accurately identify each item, and sometimes in a few words to elaborate on an unclear title. Title entries are found in the bibliography when no author or editor is apparent, while joint authors and editors are cross-referenced throughout.

The Pacific Northwest Library Association has admirably been supplementing Smith's checklist through regularly published bibliographies in their quarterly journal over the years (the PNLA Quarterly), but again not mentioning the all-important feature which is the raison for this undertaking. My criteria allowed me to skim the cream from a vast amount of literature that includes pamphlets, reports, federal, state, and local documents, technical papers, and the like, which are not found here, but would someday appear in a new edition of a "Smith". Indeed, only in the last several years has Library of Congress cataloging information been of use in identifying the type of book included in this list.

It was a tedious, but enjoyable, process to examine so many books for this purpose; surely omissions are bound to be noted, and I hope that these few oversights will be brought to my attention by thoughtful users. The ideal, of course, would be a complete list followed by a cumulated index of all the individual indexes. It would be a large order, even with indexing done on a selective basis, but a project with potentially great benefit for the long term. However, that is a dream way beyond the scope of the present compilation.
